Over Twenty Years And Still Connecting

What's Up With Laurie Moldawer (20)

Manhattan To Mountains

Laurie Moldawer (20) came to Park City in March of 2013 to escape the chaos of New York City and be able to live in the mountains. She wanted a healthier life where she could ski in a variety of big resorts every day.

Laurie didn't spend all of her time skiing. She was also eager to learn about the town and get involved. "The first year I moved to Park City, I signed up for the City Tour. I wanted to meet people and City Tour sounded great when Myles presented it at the Rotary Club." Laurie learned more about the Leadership program on that trip and from Leadership alumni Christina Miller (13) at lunch one day. "So I signed up. I had to apply several times to get in."

"I was really impressed at how Leadership has been involved with so many of the city's movers and shakers. So many people driving this town have done the Leadership Program; the civic leaders and business leaders....so many!"

A Great Match

A bit of a mover and shaker herself, Laurie founded the Park City Culinary School and it has really taken off. It's exciting in so many ways. "I get to work with so many talented and creative Chefs, like Houman Gohary (Good Karma) and Clement Gelas (Talisker)."

Park City and the Culinary School are an awesome match that really benefit each other. "It's been great for restaurants and the resorts to find ambitious and talented staff who we were able to train. It's elevated the food scene to have people who care in Park City restaurants and we've trained them to know what they're doing."

A Delicious Place

Working in the world of food...would Laurie have a 'dream meal'? "Right now, my favorite meals are at the culinary school each day. We eat better from what the students make, than I've been able to eat in nearly any restaurant in Utah. The students make their own meals each day."

In addition to becoming known as a 'foodie' area....Park City has so many other things to offer as well. When Laurie isn't working with the school, she still finds related things to check out. "I visit local farms and get to know local artisans. There are a lot of cottage food businesses growing here."

Laurie would very much like to thank Leadership alumni for all the support they've given Park City Culinary Institute. "If it wasn't for all of you, we wouldn't have our beautiful new second location in Salt Lake City."

Thanks Laurie, for helping to make Park City an even more delicious place to be!

Best of luck with the expanding Institute.
